NEWTOWN CLERGYMAN CLAIMS HE IS ENTITLED TO TIRES; STATES BOARD WHICH REFUSED HIS CLAIM IS USING DISCRIMINATORY TACTICS

Rev. Lewis Sasse, 2d, Charges
Members of Board Are
"Incompetent"

RULING IS CITED

Interpretation: Those Entitled Who Conduct Services In Two Communities

NEWTOWN, May 5—Charging that
"It has been one of the most humiliating experiences in my 15 years as a priest to be subject to the rulings of a group of definitely incompetent, ir-religious men such as constitute the local (rationing) board," the Rev.
Lewis Sasse, 2d, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, here, claims he continues to nurse two worn-out tires on his car.

The Rev. Mr. Sasse appeared before the local rationing board 18 times, he claims, also wrote the OPA in Washington four times and wrote or called
T. Elmer Transeau, state rationing administrator, half a dozen times, in an effort to secure tires. "And still I can't get the tires I need to visit my scattered congregation and help the sick," says Mr. Sasse.

The local board and County Rationing Chairman Robert W. vonHunts insist that tires are not essential to performance of his church duties. "Other clergymen have been allowed tires," asserted Mr. Sasse; "they are entitled to them and so am I. It's interesting to note that vonHunts and two of the local board members are Quakers.
And the Episcopal Church is not particularly popular in these parts. These men have no understanding of the work the church is doing and care nothing about it. They are indifferent to all but their own faith."

Mr. Sasse charged the board with "discriminatory tactics" against himself and his congregation.

Charles W. Roberts, Jr., Newtown
lawyer, chairman; Edward Briggs, Newtown, dog breeder, and Thomas Marshall, Wrightstown well-to-do farmer, comprise the board, the latter two being Friends.

Mr. Briggs advised him to buy bootleg tires and if they were too expensive to buy used tires.

Surprise Move At Madagascar May
Net United Nations Three Warships

London—One jump ahead of the enemy in a surprise move that may net
the United Nations three French warships as well as vital naval and air bases, British occupational forces including Commando units today landed on the island of Madagascar in the Indian Ocean.

First reports said little opposition was encountered.
But the German radio broadcast an announcement from Paris to the effect that French troops on the 1,000-mile long island thwart the Indian Ocean trade routes had been ordered to oppose the "British attack."

The announcement was credited to Fernand de Brinon, Vichy ambassador to Paris.

The German news agency DNB, in a broadcast heard by Reuter in London, reported that a French submarine tender, apparently the Jules Verne, was sunk in resisting the British landing.

Official information in Berlin, DNB added, said that fighting still was in progress and that the French already had suffered casualties. The British were said to have captured a shore battery and that operations were continuing.

From Vichy came a report that Marshal Petain had called an emergency meeting of his cabinet at which former Minister of Colonies Admiral Rene Platon was present.

Aided by fighter planes, the bombers also attacked enemy air fields in France and shipping off the coasts of Holland and Norway. Three British bombers are missing.

Meanwhile, it was learned that German fighter planes for the first time escorted bombers in attacks on Britain last night.

"Jap" Spearheads Advance; Chinese Fight Desperately

Chungking—With Japanese spearheads already reported to have crossed the Chinese border into Yunnan Province from Burma, Chinese troops were fighting desperately today, determined to inflict maximum casualties on the enemy before falling back under tremendous pressure.

Waiting, just across the Chinese border, has not been occupied as yet, a military spokesman stated.

A Japanese drive on Bhamo was expected in an effort to cut Chinese communications in the area.

The plaintiffs thereupon took an appeal and had a jury trial in civil court to determine their damages and the jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs in the sum of $500 in the January term in 1940. A motion for a new trial was then filed by the plaintiff husband-attorney and his wife.

were seized and sold by the county treasurer at tax sales.

The sales to the new owners were

It is Stated

CANNOT BE INCREASED

Bristol's Fair Rent Committee plans to continue to function until such time as its services are no longer required by the Government. This statement was made today by a spokesman for the Committee. Some confusion had arisen due to the fact that the Philadelphia Fair Rent Committee plans to disband, according to stories appearing in the press of that city.

The Bristol Fair Rent Committee has received word that rents in Bristol have been frozen as of March 1st, this year, according to the office of Price Administrator, Henderson. Rents cannot be increased now, according to the spokesman of the Bristol Fair Rent Committee.

If rents are increased the tenants have the privilege of filing a protest with the Fair Rent Committee who in turn will file the name of the landlord with the proper authorities in Washington.

Motorists Are Paying

ing by motorists through the streets of Bristol is bearing fruit.
The police are constantly checking
those who violate the speed laws here.

Summons are issued for the motorists and they must appear before a justice of the peace for a hearing.

During the month of March, $80
in fines were collected and turned into the borough treasury, and during April $70 in fines was paid
by those found guilty.

The hearings were before Jus-

ZION CONGREGATION TO AID MEN IN SERVICE

Goal of Lutheran World Action is Set at $650,000;
Drive Next Sunday

A SPIRITUAL AID

Zion Lutheran Church will unite with all Lutheran congregations in the country in a drive called Lutheran World Action, which is scheduled for Sunday, May 10th. The goal of the appel is $650,000, the amount to maintain these Lutheran services for a year, said the Rev. Paul R. Ronge, pastor.

The Lutheran Church has now set up 31 service centers in all parts of the country, in communities adjoining the largest concentrations of Lutheran men. These centers are staffed by pastors who have the responsibility of ministering to the spiritual needs of men in the service. "The fact that these pastors have personal interviews with about 5,000 men each month is evidence of the real effectiveness of this phase of the Service Commission's work," said the Rev. Ronge.

The Lutheran centers are visited by about 25,000 men each month, who attend worship services and Bible classes; play games, cook their own meals, read, etc. In San Francisco the need was so great that the commission took over a completely furnished 165 room hotel.

"It should be made clear," said the Rev. Ronge, "that this program does not in any way conflict with that of the U. S. O. Leaders of the Lutheran Church believe that the Church has a responsibility to minister to the spiritual needs of its members wherever they may be."

The Service Commission has also initiated a service to chaplains in the army and navy. It sends them names and addresses of soldiers, prayer books, tracts, field communion sets, etc.

"A part of the fund to be raised,"
the local clergyman informed, "will go towards the continuation of aid to Lutheran missions in those countries in the war zone. In India, Africa, China and other countries, are many Lutheran missions no longer able to receive aid from Norway, Finland, Germany, France and Denmark. Such missions have been taken over by the Lutherans of America."

The members of Zion Lutheran Church will give their offering towards this appeal on Mother's Day, next Sunday.

SKILLED MECHANICS

One of the jobs assigned to the new War Man Power Commission is what amounts to rationing of skilled mechanics. There is a serious shortage of good men. Training schools are sending many young men and women into the shops, but the demand continues far ahead of the supply.

Today there is competition between the Army and munitions factories for skilled men, and the Navy is recruiting skilled workers in competition with both. Employers are conducting raids by offering higher pay and better working conditions to lure men from one munitions industry to another.

It is estimated that 10,000,000 more workers, mostly skilled, will be needed when war production is at its peak.

Under the selective service system every man is supposed to be assigned to the work for which he is best suited. If women are registered, it will include them. It should be carried out according to plan, which means assigning every man to the job for which he is best fitted and stopping the competition and raiding.

Providing 10,000,000 additional men, most of them skilled in some particular work or trade, for the war factories will be one of the most formidable undertakings ever contemplated in America. It will require a training program of unprecedented proportions, it will require provision of additional housing on a huge scale because a large percentage of these workers will be employed at points distant from their present homes.

Providing the armament, munitions and multitudinous articles of supply needed for the army to crush the Axis will require the greatest production effort in history. The United States will be found equal to the task.

YANKS ARE COMING

In the First World War a stalemate was soon reached which lapsed into trench combat. The scales were evenly balanced for many months. Then came the Yanks, and even the knockout of Russia couldn't alter the tide. In this war a similar balance has almost been reached.

But this is a fluid war, and only on the Russian front, or possibly in Libya, have operations approached a static state. The Axis effort is at the top of its curve. Its production maximum has been reached, and all of its forces are deployed. Indeed, some of its lines, especially in the Orient, are dangerously extended.

Both Germany and Japan have large areas and extensive coastline to defend if they are to retain most of their booty. There are now at least 6,000,000 completely trained and equipped men in the services of Britain and the Dominion. The Yank forces are only beginning to go into action. While the United States has been supplying Britain, Russia, China and Turkey for many months, this effort has been sharply increased since Pearl Harbor.

The Axis has lost heavily in arms and heavily in its best men. The subjugated lands have been picked clean. The Axis is at bay. Once again the Yanks are about to balance the scales, and then tip them toward victory.

Hitler's dilemma is whether to watch the RAF pulverize all of Germany—and if the answer is "no," what?

Sow Perennial Flowers Before Hot Summer Days

Gardeners who plan to grow perennials from seed this year, and every gardener should do so, will have an easier time of it if they will sow in May instead of waiting until June or later.

When summers are hot and dry it is often quite a task to get seeds to germinate in June, and seedling plants must be given extra attention at that time to keep from being scorched to death.

In April and May, however, we usually have cool moist weather which hastens germination and is favorable to the young plants. Many of the perennials germinate best in cool weather. Delphiniums, for example, grow best in a temperature of 40 degrees.

When seeds are sown in April or early May the seedlings should be transplanted in July so that they have room to develop into sturdy plants. They will be large enough by fall to be planted in the border where they are to grow.

There is no garden operation which saves money faster than growing one's own perennials. When plants are purchased they are relatively expensive because of the long growing period, the intensive care they have had and the large percentage of loss. Plants have never been grown successfully in large scale operations because of the limited area over which they can be distributed satisfactorily and the high cost of packing such fragile subjects for shipment. The gardener who grows his own pays only for the seed. The task of caring for the plants and observing their growth is a fascinating recreation, if he is a true garden fan.

Among the perennials with which beginners will have little difficulty are columbines, dianthus, delphiniums, gaillardias, coreopsis, hollyhocks, pyrethrums, sweet williams, veronica spicata and violas. Take a secluded and protected spot in the vegetable garden for a seedbed. Be as careful about preparing the soil as if it were to be put in a flat. Plant perennials in rows, like vegetables, labeling each row. Thin out carefully to the proper distances apart in the row.

Crime at Castaway by EDITH BRISTOL

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

Two significant things happened next day. Both are recorded briefly in my diary.

In the first place, after the long delay, the Durfee inquest was held—and what an anti-climax that turned out to be!

With his face still puffed and purple from his recent misadventure with the hornets' nest, the Gallina coroner tried to impart to the hearing a feeling of drama and mystery. But the public interest in a mystery will hold suspense for just so long. An unsolved crime goes stale. After a time another, more mysterious, supersedes it. And that's what happened in the case of Worth Durfee.

Estelle's death, following so closely on the killing of her husband, had stolen the show. It had more class, anyhow, as I heard one of the reporters whisper to another while we waited for the arrival of the coroner.

The finding of the body of a middle-aged eccentric, not too popular in his community, whether by bullet wound or by accidental automobile crash, had no thrills to compete with the mystery of Estelle's murder—if it was a murder. So the Durfee investigation became routine question and answer—routine verdict—"death at the hands of person or persons unknown."

I was fed up with courts and coroners. I was weary of questions and answers. I wanted to get out into the brilliant October sunshine and walk over the hills to forget this atmosphere of plot and counterplot. But I was not destined to be free from it—not yet, anyhow.

Something was brewing in the Gallina court house—trouble was in the air. You could feel it in the tension of the courtroom. It was written on the faces of the court attaches. Whispers and buzzings in the corridors—I was aware of it the minute I stepped inside the building.

And as we drove home from the inquest, Lance told me what it was. He had managed, somehow, so that I rode in his car and Sydney took Martha in his roadster.

"Somebody's going to be put on the spot by District Attorney Stevens," Lance said, swinging his machine out of the town traffic and into the broad ribbon of the highway that led toward Castaway.

"How?"

"Well, there's a first rate feud on between the district attorney's office and the sheriff's office. It's been going on for some time and it's coming to a crisis now. This case—or rather these cases—are going to make it a knockout, drag-out scrap between Stevens and Nathan Allen."

"Tell me about it," I said. "I haven't heard anything about such a feud between officials."

"There's not an awful lot to tell—except that I feel sorry for the fellow who gets caught between the two sides of the scrap." There was nothing in Lance's words, right then to sound prophetic, but looking back on it there might well have been.

"Stevens is a young man," Lance went on, "eager to get ahead and ambitious. A good official, too. But how is it with district at-forget that my only experience with courts of any kind has been since I came to Castaway."

Lance explained. "When a district attorney comes up for reelection—and Stevens will next year—he makes his campaign on the number of convictions. He asks people to vote for him on the grounds of the number of people he has convicted."

"That doesn't sound quite fair to me," I said. "Suppose some of them shouldn't have been convicted?"

"That's the way it's done, fair or unfair. He's supposed to convict. That's his duty. And Stevens is after Allen's scalp for being too easy on the criminals in these parts."

"Would Stevens rather have Allen arrest a man who was innocent than not to arrest anyone at all? To me, it sounded infamous, this system."

"I wouldn't say it quite as strong as that. But Stevens is determined to have somebody arrested and prosecuted for the killings of my uncle and of Durfee. About Estelle he's not so much concerned."

"Why not?"

"Because that, my sweet child, took place outside of his jurisdiction. And I must state, in my opinion—which may not be worth much in law—that Stevens is more concerned with getting somebody convicted in Gallina County than he is with finding a murderer. Or two murderers."

"Wasn't that what the city detectives tried to do? They tried to hang something on you whether you were guilty or not?"

"Now, Gerry, let's be fair. Somebody called the city police and told them I had threatened a murder. Could they afford to overlook that? Of course not. They found a gun in my bunkhouse that fitted the bullets of two killings. Could they disregard that? They were within their rights. I don't blame them."

"Sometimes I think you are too logical," I protested. "You don't blame anybody."

"Don't get that idea into your pretty red head. Somebody tried to frame me with that telephone call to the police and with that gun, registered in my name—and all I hope is I get a chance to take it out of his hide before I turn him over to the authorities." Lance set his chin in a hard line. "But, coming back to the feud between Allen and the D. A.—Nate's slow, deliberate way of doing things doesn't set well with Stevens. He wants action. And he's going to get it. He's going to have somebody arrested for at least one of the crimes at Castaway—and I'll bet it's before very twenty-four hours elapse."

There were several things I wanted to ask Lance—perhaps this was as good a time to ask them as I'd ever get. I really wanted most of all to ask him about that warning uttered to Walter Gregg, so long ago, but I never could quite bring myself to ask about that.

I did ask him another question, though: "Lance, do you know who overheard you say you'd be glad to see Estelle get a double portion of rat poison?"

"Gosh that was an unfortunate remark of mine! When will I ever learn to keep my mouth shut when I'm angry! You overheard it. And Aunt Martha. And Allen. Nobody else."

"Harry Craven overheard it. He was coming in just as you and Allen went out."

Lance was thoughtful for several miles along the rolling Brown hills. "It might have been Craven, at that," he said, after a long pause. "He could easily have planted the gun, too. Craven has as much of an alibi for the night Uncle Walter was killed as I have—that is, it might be disproved. So might mine. He might have been involved in the killing of Worth Durfee. But why?"

"We knew he was trying to blackmail Durfee. Maybe Durfee refused to be blackmailed."

"That might answer for Durfee's killing. But what about the first crime? Why should anybody trouble to come into a house at night and shoot a man who might be dispossessed of in other ways? Ways less likely to be found out? It doesn't add up. He might have done it—I don't say I think he did, but he might be capable of it. But why that way—and that night?"

All the way home to Castaway we debated the question. But somehow we reached no conclusion. But somehow we seemed to have grown closer together in the course of the ride. We were growing more closely united, every day, now, in our efforts to find the mysterious cause of all our tragedies. And I promised Lance one more effort, just as we reached the ranchhouse.

"I've been very distant to Harry Craven. Every time he's tried to be friendly I've held him off. If he comes to the house again—and I expect he will—I think I'll try to act more friendly and see if I can learn something about him that will help us. Would you consider that being too deceitful?" I asked.

"If you can learn anything from that double-crossing cheat that will help, go to it," was Lance's answer. "I can't bear to speak to him—but I've always heard that women can stand more than men can."

The second event of great importance noted in my diary for that Friday was the report from Allen, telephoned from Gallina to keep us informed of events bearing on our mysteries: Six more of the stolen bills had turned up. These—hundred dollar ones—came from an automobile trailer manufacturer in San Francisco. He had fitted up a deluxe trailer on order of an elderly woman. Had delivered it to her driver, who paid cash for the car and drove it away.

Allen left for the city to investigate the sale, to check the license for the trailer, hopeful that this, at last, would give him something to work on.

Kobe met us at the door with an announcement. "Gentleman," he called to see Mr. Rance—"Kobe's inability to put the letter 'L' in its proper place led to linguistic complications."

"He's saying he from the camp at the—excuse me—dam. He's saying also he will be back. I think he is slightly—excuse me—tight. But he assures me he will return. Also he being covered with much white stuff. Maybe flour. Maybe something else."

they see one of the reconnaissance planes catapulted from one of our warships to scout the surrounding ocean lanes.

It's a great sight to see one of those planes return, land on the water and be hauled aboard by an electric crane in less than a minute. Lt. Stan Hindman of Benton, Ill. (Annapolis '39) tells me the plane can be hauled up in 30 seconds.

There is not a single case of sea sickness aboard now; the ship's bay is virtually empty and the doctors—all first lieutenants—have almost nothing to do. These "non-paying guests" as the Adjutant, Captain Hal Means of Stonewall, La., calls them, are Drs. Joe Palmieri, Nat Lickerman, Dave Scher, Santo Cappaia—all of New York—Glenn Kahler of Wichita Falls, Texas, R. J. Amato of Newark and the ship's surgeon, Murray Mirsak of San Francisco.

However, the two dentists—Captain Winthrop of San Francisco and Lt. Claude Tarbet of Homer, La.—have had no such picnic. Captain Winthrop tells me he has yanked enough teeth to fill a rain barrel in the last six days.

I overheard an amusing argument between Capt. Winthrop and Pvt. Elom Eshleman today. Eshleman is a former Franklin and Marshall College boy who was a staff announcer for a year at Station WGAL, Lancaster, Pa. Eshleman has a magnificent speaking voice and he also had a terrible toothache. He was afraid if he had the tooth extracted it would affect his voice. The captain assured him it would make no difference in his speaking.

Finally, the captain grew exasperated and he laid down the law: "Either that rotten molar comes out or you go on suffering. Which do you want?" The troublesome tooth came out in a hurry.

Another man who is not unduly overworked is the Provost Marshal, Lt. Leo J. McLarney, a curly black-haired Irishman from the Sidewalks of New York and one of the most popular officers aboard. McLarney says he hasn't one soldier in the brig which is a tribute I think to his considerate eye as well as to the troops' discipline.

This afternoon we had a long series of boxing and wrestling bouts, and as the only newspaperman aboard, I was elected to referee and fry in the sun for about three hours. And that reminds me we are all becoming the color of old shoe leather.

Then came chow, several hours of singing and somebody played Taps. Ever hear Taps at sea when you're far from home and headed only God and the Army high command knows where? Believe me, those slow beautiful haunting notes do something to you.

Thirteen attended the meeting of the Defense Council. Paul Sine, head of the local Council, admittedly was disappointed at the attendance and makes an urgent appeal for better attendances at these meetings. George Hetherington, chief air raid warden, announced that Harold Hunsberger had asked to be relieved of his duties as Post Warden, and that H. I. Moyer, Jr., had been appointed to the post in that district. Mr. Hetherington told the group that the Defense and War bond campaign is progressing quite satisfactorily, but that final returns are not yet available.

Finger-printing of local school pupils was begun on Tuesday with four women working under the direction of Mrs. William High, doing this work. Mrs. Paul Sine, in charge of finger-printing in Upper Bucks, reported that virtually every school district in her jurisdiction had begun finger-printing early this week, and that by the end of the week every school child in Upper Bucks will have been finger-printed.

Miss Marion Fetter, of the Women's Motor Mechanics School, reported that 21 women are enrolled in the current class and that the work is progressing in a most satisfactory manner.

A steel cabinet has been purchased for storage of drugs and chemicals and other hospital supplies.

600 Students Participate
In Annual Music Festival

QUAKERTOWN, May 5.—Participants in the annual music festival of Bucks County public schools, held in Quakertown high school auditorium on Saturday evening, numbered over 600 students. The groups represented 17 elementary and high schools in the county, directed by 17 music supervisors.

The concert, enjoyed by between 900 and 1000 persons, was presented in five parts, the junior high school chorus, a boys' glee club, a three-part girls' chorus, a four-part mixed chorus and a band of at least 80 pieces.

During the evening Charles Boehm, superintendent of Bucks Co. schools, briefly reviewed the musical activities in the schools of the county. He also highly praised the supervisors and the youthful musicians, all of whom seemed to have been at their best during the evening.

Earl J. Frick, president of the school organizations in the county and supervisor of instrumental music in the Doylestown borough schools, also spoke briefly.

Accompanists throughout the entire evening included junior and senior high school students in schools in various parts of the county.

Marjorie Kilmer, a Quakertown high school student, served as the announcer.

sive to get his congregation to buy them for him, asserted Mr. Sasse. But Mr. Briggs denied the charge.

The board's stand, said Marshall, is in line with OPA interpretations of a clergyman's essential needs. "The position is that a minister is not entitled to tires unless he conducts services in two communities and must, in absence of public transportation, use his machine for getting from one town to another," explained Marshall.

Philadelphia County Rationing Board said that up until April 24th all ministers were entitled to tires, but under an amendment of that date, clergymen are allowed tires only for emergency purposes.

DIAMOND AND BADENHAUSEN NINES BATTLE TO SCORELESS TIE WITH DEAN AND SULLIVAN IN MID-SEASON FORM

"Eddie" Sullivan and Paul Dean appeared to be in mid-season form last evening as the Diamond and the Badenhause team battled to a scoreless deadlock on St. Ann's field, in the Bristol Suburban League's opener.

Both hurlers pitched superbly as Sullivan allowed the boiler-makers but a lone hit while Dean gave the Mill Street outfit two safe hits. Sullivan had eight strikeouts to his credit while Dean whiffed three. The Diamond pitcher walked four batters while Dean was tight with his passes and did not allow any free passes.

There was only one semblance of a run in the game. In the fourth inning with Bilger at bat, Goodwin, who was on third, made a dash for the plate and was out on a very close play.

Badenhause had a runner reach third in the first inning when Bilger and Lauer worked a double-steal but that was as far as they got for Miksis ran over to near first base to snatch a fly from the bat of Whyte.

Only seventeen Diamond batters faced Dean in the tilt, and only three reached base. Sullivan and Jefferies had hits while McCue reached base on an error but a double-play wiped up Sullivan on his hit. Only one of the green-outfitted team reached second base and that was when McCue stole second in the second.

However, it took a fine running catch by Goodwin to rob Jefferies of a hit in the fourth. The Diamond shortstop lambasted a Dean pitch to deep left along the foul line. Goodwin gave chase and by fast sprinting managed to make a glove-handed catch of the pill.

President Paul Voltz announced last night that this tied game will be played on St. Ann's field Friday night.

TWO DOUBLE PLAYS SPOIL HUNTER IX'S DEBUT IN BASEBALL

Munitions Makers Drop An 8 to 5 Verdict To Edgely A. C.

RALLIES WERE CHECKED

Lada and Linck Did The Twirling For the Opposing Nines

Two fast double-plays spoiled the Hunter team's debut in the Bristol Suburban League as the munitions makers dropped an 8-5 verdict to the Edgely A. C. last evening on the Edgely diamond.

The twin-killings in the second and fourth frames checked Hunter's rallies and prevented runs from crossing the plate. The one in the fourth stopped at least one run from crossing as both Biedka and Lada opened with hits and then Walker hit into a two-ply out. Watson's smash then got by J. Dick. "Eddie" Lada, Trenton youth, did the pitching for the Hunter team while Ralph Linck hurled for the Edgelyites. The losing aggregation outbatted the Edgely team, 9 to 8 but the four-run spurt by the Edgelyites in the second was too much of a lead to overcome.

"Vic" Rockhill, Tony Palumbo, and Joe Stemme had two hits each during the tilt. Both of Palumbo's blows were for extra bases, he connecting for a double in the first and starting off the third with a triple, both blows being responsible for runs.

Rockhill's double followed a triple from the bat of Linck and climaxed the final Edgely rally which netted two runs in the third.

BRISTOL RAMBLERS BEAT TRENTON SENATORS

TRENTON, N. J., May 5.—Saturday night at the White City Roller rink the fast skating Bristol Ramblers defeated the undefeated Trenton Senators in a fast and thrilling roller hockey game by the score of 7 to 2, before the largest gathering of spectators to witness a game in that city this season.

On arriving at Trenton Coach Pop Keene had only eight players in uniform and no goalie, so he put Bruce Reeder, a defense man, in the net where he played an excellent game of goal tender by making many beautiful saves. The Bristol boys with their clever stick handling, body checking and fast breaking passing attack, completely outplayed the Trenton club.

Reeder in the net and Bowers and Sottung form the defense for the local outfit with the offensive being well taken care of by George Ritter, with 93 goals, Bud Bowen, Frankie Dyer, John Ritter and Billie Bell.

This was the twenty-second win of the season against four defeats for the boys of Coach Pop Keene.

"Too Much... Too Soon"

"Let that be Our Goal," said Donald M. Nelson
when taking over America's War Production

With that one neat paraphrase democracy's age-old bugbear—"too little, too late"—was banished for the duration. There was one thing Mr. Nelson didn't say, however, although all who read his words knew he had it in mind. Building new plants... adding new equipment will not be enough to reach this goal. Greater efficiency, more production from present facilities are the means by which America will keep faith with the men on its world-wide fighting fronts.

It is to the everlasting glory of American industry that this challenge is being met.

Your neighbors in the Philadelphia Electric Company, whose job it is to see that there is no dimming of the spark that keeps industry's wheels turning, know firsthand of the performance records being set up by war plants in this area. And from experience we know what it takes to make these accomplishments possible.

More electrical energy from a given amount of coal—greater capacities for established stations—new methods to prolong the life of materials are just some of the things that are enabling P. E. to produce more than ever, faster than ever. And so it is with all industry.

Yesterday's ceaseless research and experimentation are yielding today's staggering harvest of war implements. It was America's enterprise, ingenuity and resourcefulness that tipped the scales in 1918. They cannot fail in the crucial days ahead.
